

IF THESE WALLS COULD TALK

An Exclusive Look into Governor and First Lady Deal's Private Living Quarters: The Twin Bedroom photos by: Picture This Studio

As we continue to make our way throughout the private living quarters of Governor and First Lady Deal, our next stop is the twin bedroom.

The Fine Arts Committee along with Zimmerman Design Associates Inc. were challenged with creating a bedroom durable enough for the Deals' grandchildren yet sophisticated enough for other guests. The first decision was to move a rug, more suitable in size, into the bedroom. Traditional twin beds were taken from the attic and refurbished by molding and paneling specialists, Architectural Millwork. Designers Workroom was tasked with creating the coverlets in a beautiful paisley fabric and trim from Kravet Fabrics along with a complimenting textured fabric for the shams. They were matched with a Brunschwig & Fils, a company that specializes in high-quality textiles, in woven rose check for the box pleated dust skirt. Furniture Works also used the woven rose check to reupholster the his and hers chairs and ottoman.

As with the other rooms, window treatments were chosen to contribute to the overall décor of the room. Soft Roman shades were made from a stylized flower and diamond patterned Kravet fabric.

One of the focal points of the room is the upper section of an existing secretary that is a showplace for objets d'art.

The twin bedroom walls feature paintings of the Savannah area, including a watercolor on loan from Magnolia Art Gallery by Georgia artist Stan Strickland. The bedroom colors were carried into the bath via a beautiful Lee Jofa hummingbird wallpaper and a granite vanity top fabricated by Bella Maria replaced the dated laminated one. S
